

SUMMARY:

Title: The development of ski bindings after World War II

Objectives: The objective of the work is to capture and describe the major events in the development of the downhill bindings that took place since the end of II. World War II to the present.

Methodology: The work has a historical character using historiographic methods supplemented by a content analysis of the document. In particular, the historical, chronological and direct method was used to supplement the content analysis of the document

Conclusion: A summary of the data in chronological form enriches the theoretical background of skiing history. The work extends available information sources on topics that have not been elaborated in a comprehensive way.

Keywords: Ski equipment, ski bindings, history of skiing